Summary

Born in Klosterneuburg, Lower Austria, I moved with my parents from Austria to Chicago (USA) at the beginning of 2000 and went to kindergarten there. My father has a strong international orientation and worked for an American company until 2006. Due to his professional requirements, we moved back to Hamburg (Germany) in September 2001, where I also attended kindergarten and preschool until 2003. In 2003 we moved to Great Britain, where I spent all of my school years and stayed until I moved to Austria after completing my apprenticeship. After finishing compulsory school, I studied sports science at college and graduated successfully in 2015.

Due to the limited career opportunities in the sports sector, I started an apprenticeship as a printing technician at Nutshell Packeting in autumn 2015, which I successfully completed at the end of 2017/Jan. 2018. Originally, I had applied to this company as an apprentice in the commercial sector and alternatively in the logistics sector. However, as there was only one apprenticeship available in the printing sector, I decided, on the advice of my mother, to first do the apprenticeship in the printing sector, with the aim of being able to switch to other areas later in the company. During 2015, when I was looking for apprenticeships and job offers, the supply was fairly limited in the area I was living in.
